LIVESTOCK PRICES

Coming on top of the lifting of the Manitoba embargo on western cattle, the application of federal export policies to cattle is welcome. These two steps should go a long way toward ending the chaotic conditions caused by the outbreak of foot and mouth disease and the embargo (now removed), which followed.

At $23.35 per cwt. for good steers, the floor price is about $10 lower than the market price of a year ago. A similar reduction may be noted in hog prices. There has been criticism of these floor prices on the ground that they are too low. But there is good reason to believe that even if there had been no outbreak of foot and mouth disease—which has been responsible for the embargoes and other market dislocations—the ordinary factors of supply and demand, operating freely across the international border, would have produced prices very close to the present floors. Indeed, quite substantial reductions had occurred before the foot and mouth outbreak was detected.

It is worth mentioning that in the United States there has been no foot and mouth outbreak to complicate the situation, but prices have fallen substantially. By-products such as hides and tallow, whose prices are an important factor in the livestock trade to livestock producers, have also undergone marked price reductions.

The main reason why livestock prices have sagged in the United States and would have fallen here in like manner whether or not there had been a foot and mouth outbreak, has been the substantial increase in pork supplies. In the first 17 weeks of 1962 Canadian hog slaughterings were half a million higher than the corresponding period of last year. And the United States the increase was two-and-three-quarter million.

In this period there was a reduction in the number of cattle slaughtered in Canada of 12.9 per cent, but the hog slaughter was up by 33.9 per cent. A very slight reduction—0.1 per cent—occurred in the U.S. cattle kill, but this, too, was more than counterbalanced by an increase in the hog slaughter of 12.9 per cent. It is the weight of this increase in the overall meat supply that has driven prices down in the United States and is largely responsible for the price reductions here.

Hog price reductions in the United States and Canada in this period have been almost identical. The U.S. average price for this period has gone down by 19.9 per cent, and the Canadian, down by 20.2 per cent. Thus it would seem that the closing of the U.S. market had little or no difference to Canadian hog prices. The effect of the embargo is apparent, however, in the comparative cattle price reductions. In the United States the average price for the period is down by 5.1 per cent. In Canada, the reduction is 10.2 per cent.

THE AGRICULTURAL PICTURE IN CANADA

The agricultural picture in Canada at the present time in some parts is excellent, but in other areas rather gloomy.

Fresh outbreaks of foot and mouth disease in southern Saskatchewan will delay the date when the United States market for our livestock may be expected to reopen, and at this time farmers are carrying over animals that normally would have been exported, either alive or as fresh meat. However, the Federal Government is giving attention to the problem of the disposition of surplus livestock products, and some relief may be expected as the result of an arrangement of a three-sided deal designed to move such products to the United Kingdom in place of New Zealand, where the stock is present, and from which boats to the north shore can quickly arrive in Great Britain. That is why it is so important that every livestock producer in Canada and Canada should be kept abreast of news as it is located.

The livestock picture in Canada is not as bright as it was in the early spring, but it has been two-fold. First, it has meant that grain which could not be harvested last year for climatic reasons has largely been saved. The out-turn is better than could have been hoped for when harvest was expected.

Secondly, seedling in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta was completed before the normal time in most areas, and well ahead of last year's late start. Compared with last year, prairie wheat and barley acreages are slightly greater, while those sown to oats, rye, and flax are somewhat smaller. Moisture conditions, generally are good.

Mrs. E. Macpherson left last week for Fairview, to enjoy a vacation at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Macpherson is farm manager of the provincial school of agriculture at Fairview.

Following a warm, close morning on Saturday last, very heavy clouds developed in the south, about 4 a.m. and quickly rolled north, turned to a thunderstorm with sheets of rain and a suspicion of hail. Sunday's blow with blustering winds, the rain falling heavily in the evening. It should be mentioned that the grader was working on village streets Saturday morning. An odd light shower occurred Monday, and at the time of writing the weather remains unsettled following a very heavy downpour overnight.

W. C. (Clay) Aitken, of Edmonton, and a former resident of Delia, was fatally injured Friday last, when a loaded gravel truck ran over his chest. For some time past he had been employed by the Regent Drilling Company. Clayton Aitken was a veteran of both World Wars, enlisting with Delia district lads in early 1916 in the 137th Battalion, serving in France with the Machine Gun Corps. Between the wars, among other activities he served a hitch with a special British Columbia police force, raised to guard recalcitrant Doukhobors on an island in the Gulf of Georgia. When the Second World War broke out, he again enlisted and served with the Forestry Corps.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strang

The threat of 15-B Stem Rust in Canada. The wheat crops of the United States and Canada are threatened by a new race of rust, 15-B; and perhaps by other new races of rust.

The rust information is that the risk of damage to this coming crop in Canada is not very great, for much less than the usual amount of stem rust has been found in Texas and in Central and Northern Mexico (the source of most of our rust epidemics). Naturally if these rust spores—which are spread to some extent—multiply greatly under favorable conditions, and if strong winds blow from the south through the United States and into Western Canada, and if the spring wheat crop should be abundant with soft and soggy weather some damage is possible. There is, of course, always the risk of an epidemic starting up here locally where laboratory bushes are present, and from which boats to the north shore can quickly arrive in Great Britain. That is why it is so important that every livestock producer in Canada and Canada should be kept abreast of news as it is located.

Seed Growers and Agricultural Scientists

During the last few years their will be held in Ontario two important agricultural annual meetings. The Canadian Seed Growers' Association and the Agricultural Institute of Canada. The Agricultural Institute, holding its 22nd annual meeting, will convene more than 5,000 of the scientific agriculturists of Canada who in every field of scientific effort, from the laboratory, through the field, and with make known to farmers new and valuable principles and methods of agriculture.

The Canadian Seed Growers' Association, holding its 48th annual meeting, comprises some 4,000 professional seed growers who take the small handful of new varieties and improved strains of cereal, forage, fruit and garden vegetable crops produced by professional plant breeders, multiply these into larger quantities and make them available to farmers without any loss of true to variety or purity; and by using the right rules and regulations of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

These two bodies of men are part of the very foundation of Canada's agricultural production and prosperity. They have much to do with the continuing improvement of Canada's crops and livestock, and with the maintenance of that high quality upon which Canada depends for the sale of her export agricultural products. The members of these two organizations render their important services in their work, without reward, for the benefit of the whole of Canada, and are respected and appreciated by all of us.
